- To provide a platform for students to perform and engage with dramatic arts.

Report:

Curtain Call was a true showcase of theatrical talent, bringing the art of drama to life on campus. The event featured a series of plays and skits that captivated the audience from start to finish. The performances were a mix of classic and contemporary theatre, each bringing its own colour to the stage.

The evening began with a powerful adaptation of a Shakespearean tragedy, where the students' command of the language and their deep emotional engagement with the characters left the audience in awe. The use of minimalistic props and lighting added to the intensity of the performance, highlighting the raw talent of the actors.

Following this, a modern play tackled social issues with a blend of humour and poignancy, striking a chord with the audience. The actors skilfully balanced comedic timing with moments of serious reflection, making the play both entertaining and thought-provoking. One of the standout skits was an original piece written and directed by a group of students, which cleverly used satire to comment on the complexities of modern relationships. The skit was met with laughter and applause, as it resonated with many in the audience.

Curtain Call wasn't just about the performances; it was also a platform for learning and growth. In the weeks leading up to the event, the cultural club organized a series of workshops that were open to all students, regardless of their prior experience in theatre. The workshops covered essential aspects of dramatics, including acting techniques, scriptwriting, and stage management. Led by seasoned theatre practitioners, these sessions were hands-on and interactive, providing students with practical skills and insights into the world of theatre.

Participants in the workshops had the opportunity to apply what they learned in their performances, resulting in polished and professional productions. The camaraderie among the participants was evident, as they supported each other both on and off stage, creating a strong sense of community within the group.

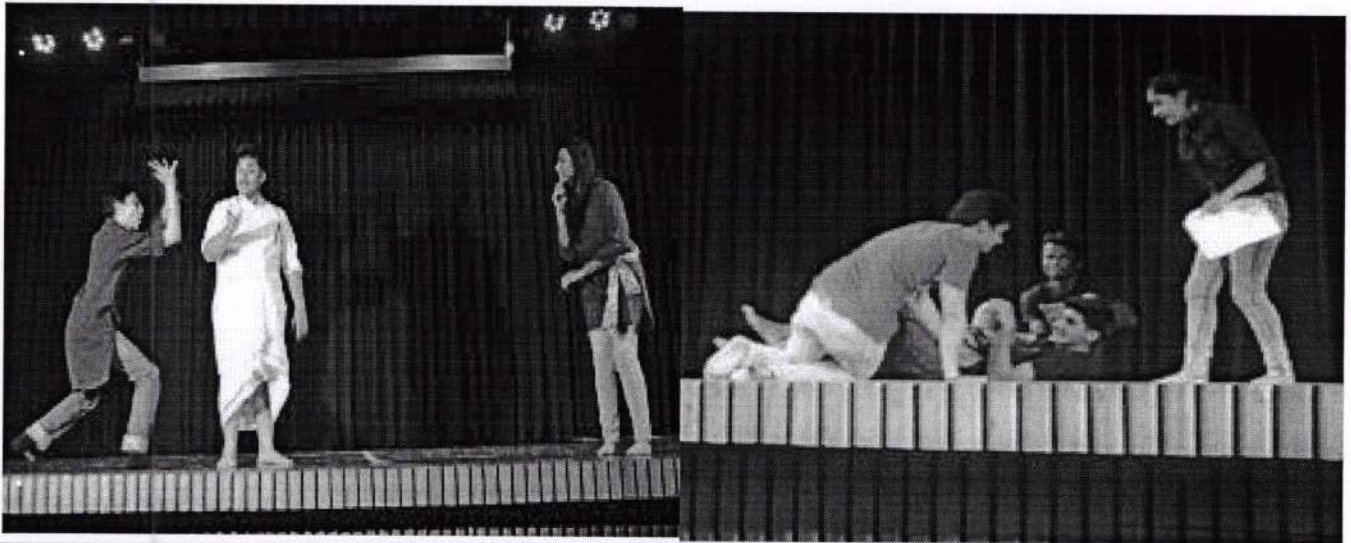

The success of Curtain Call was not only reflected in the applause and cheers from the audience but also in the growth of the students involved. Many of them stepped out of their comfort zones to take on challenging roles, and their hard work paid off in performances that were both impressive and memorable. The event left a lasting impact, with many in the audience expressing a newfound appreciation for theatre and the arts.
