Detailed Report

On 30th August 2024, the Gender Champion Club held an Article Writing Competition on “The Role of Women in Society,” aiming to celebrate women's achievements while examining societal shifts needed to foster a more inclusive world. Open to all students across disciplines, the competition encouraged participants to explore the theme from diverse perspectives, such as historical, societal, personal, or analytical, in articles ranging from 700-1000 words. Through these reflections, students delved into gender roles and considered personal contributions to a supportive environment for women.

The submissions covered many topics, including the impact of women leaders, the evolution of women's rights, and personal stories of inspiring women. Many also addressed the complexities women face in balancing professional and familial responsibilities. Each entry brought unique insights, with the articles evaluated by faculty based on originality, relevance, depth, writing quality, and impact.

Special recognition was given to the top three entries, while all participants received certificates. The winning articles presented thought-provoking discussions on evolving roles for women and the challenges that remain. A standout entry focused on the intersection of gender and technology, emphasizing the need for female empowerment in STEM fields to drive inclusive advancements. Another impactful piece highlighted women's representation in media, stressing the importance of positive role models for the younger generation. This competition not only honored the role of women in society but also invited students to actively engage in discussions on gender equity and the steps required to build a more inclusive future.
