International Peace Day is observed worldwide to highlight the importance of peace, tolerance, and harmony among individuals and communities. In alignment with this global observance, Tecnia Institute of Advanced Studies (TIAS), in association with the UBA Club, organized an awareness-based outreach activity on 20 September 2025. The initiative was conducted in two phases—initially at the TIAS Campus (Room No. 1410, PG Building) where students prepared posters, followed by a field visit to Khampur Village, Delhi for the distribution of posters and promotion of peace messages among the local community.

The activity began within the campus, where NSS volunteers and students participated in a Poster Making exercise designed to encourage creative expression on themes of peace and global harmony. Students designed visually engaging posters highlighting key ideas such as non-violence, unity in diversity, human rights, environmental sustainability, and coexistence. This preparatory phase enabled students to critically reflect on contemporary challenges such as conflict, inequality, and intolerance, while also thinking of constructive and peaceful solutions.

Under the guidance of Dr. Shalini Gupta, participants actively engaged in designing impactful posters that conveyed meaningful social messages. The session emphasized the role of youth in peacebuilding and the importance of education in shaping responsible and empathetic citizens. Students exchanged ideas, explored diverse perspectives, and developed a deeper understanding of peace as an active and continuous process rather than merely the absence of conflict.

In the second phase of the activity, students visited Khampur Village, where they interacted with community members and distributed the posters they had created. The outreach effort aimed to extend the message of peace beyond the classroom and into the community. Volunteers explained the significance of peaceful coexistence, mutual respect, and social harmony in everyday life. Through direct engagement, they encouraged villagers, especially youth and children, to adopt values of tolerance, cooperation, and respect for diversity.

The posters served as effective communication tools, carrying simple yet powerful messages that were easy to understand and remember. Students also motivated community members to become ambassadors of peace by spreading awareness within their families and social circles. This practical exposure helped students connect theoretical knowledge with real-world application, enhancing both their social awareness and communication skills.

The activity strongly reflected the Mulya Pravah value of Global Citizenship by encouraging students to take responsibility for promoting peace at the grassroots level. It reinforced the idea that peace begins with individual actions and extends to society as a whole. Students developed empathy, ethical sensitivity, and a sense of social responsibility through their interaction with the community.

From a sustainability perspective, the program aligned with multiple UN Sustainable Development Goals. It supported SDG 4 (Quality Education) by integrating value-based and experiential learning. It also contributed to SDG 10 (Reduced Inequalities) by promoting inclusiveness and respect for diversity, and SDG 16 (Peace, Justice, and Strong Institutions) by fostering awareness about peaceful and just societies.

The outcomes of the outreach activity were significant. Students enhanced their creativity, communication, leadership, and teamwork skills. The initiative also increased awareness among community members about the importance of peace and harmony in everyday life. The experience empowered students to act as change-makers and responsible citizens. In conclusion, the International Peace Day outreach activity was a meaningful initiative that successfully combined creativity with community engagement. By extending learning beyond the campus to Khampur Village, the program reinforced TIAS's commitment to value-based education, social responsibility, and holistic development. Such initiatives play a vital role in nurturing socially aware, empathetic, and globally responsible individuals dedicated to building a peaceful and inclusive society.
